DPS response 7 23 24

Hi Jim - I hope you and yours are well. Eric forwarded me your inquiry from last week, and the response of the Department is included below. Please let us know if you have any questions.

Jim

There is no need or basis for an enforcement action. Here's why:

The Commission's investigation in Docket 17-3550-INV/18-0395-PET involved a thorough and comprehensive review by both the Commission's independent pipeline safety expert and the Department's engineering division, assessing the ANGP's construction, performance, and safety. A core part of this review was to determine whether the ANGP's safety had been compromised to such a degree that its operation presented a threat to the public's safety and required immediate closure. The Commission's answer was "no," and that the pipeline is safely constructed and safe to operate.

The Commission's independent expert unequivocally concluded that the ANGP, as constructed, meets industry standards and does not pose an immediate public health and safety concern – a subject that was discussed at length in the proposal for decision that the Commission ultimately adopted. In its final order, the Commission stated that there is no existing emergency prompting the use of Section 248(k)'s temporary authorization procedures and that none of the substantial change determinations made by the Commission require reconstruction of any elements of the ANGP (See PFD as adopted by PUC's Final Order at PDF pg. 45). The Commission expressly held that had the evidence shown that the ANGP was unsafe and presented an immediate harm to public safety, the Commission would have ordered the ANGP's cessation of operations within the investigation proceeding. (PUC Final Order at PDF pg. 20).

Given that the Commission has established the absence of any emergency circumstance that warrants immediate approval for reconstruction of the ANGP, there is no basis for proceeding under Section 248(k). Rather, the upcoming Section 248 amendment proceeding is the appropriate avenue for addressing necessary approvals to VGS's substantial changes. This position aligns fully with the process outlined in the Vermont Supreme Court's April 12, 2024 remand order in Docket No. 23-AP-244 and Commission Rule 5.413. Accordingly, the Department will take no action to require VGS to seek emergency authorization for the ANGP.

Eric, I hope you are well. You have seen our motion for injunction. The Commission said to file it as a new matter. Before I file a complaint under section 209 to address the section 248(k) issue, I am writing you in the hope that the Department will initiate enforcement so I don't have to file the complaint. Could you let me know the Department's position? Thanks.

Sincerely,
Jim
